GEM: Organization with Lisa Lisson

- Organization: It's not a project, it's a system.
- Be consistent.
- Organize throughout your research day.
- Use a research plan every single time.
- Use workflows.

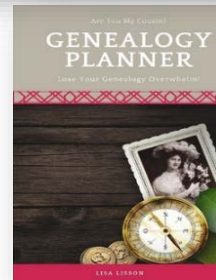

Lisa Louise Cooke's Tip:

- Put the year in the file name first. It automatically puts your files in chronological order. (Genealogy Gems Premium Members can learn how to implement Lisa's entire computer filing system by watching the Premium videos Hard Drive Organization Parts 1 & 2.)
- Always try to only touch a piece of paper once. Make a conscious decision what to do with it and do it: Work with it right now, File it, or throw it away. Don't just move it around your desk.

GEM: Evidence & Proof with Kate Eakman

The Genealogical Proof Standard tells us that we need to conduct reasonably exhaustive research in order for our work to be credible. If you've ever wondered just what constitutes "reasonable" (and if your family tree is up to snuff) my guest author Kate Eakman, professional genealogist at Legacy Tree Genealogists, has answers.

Read Kate's article Genealogical Evidence and Proof: How to know if you've compiled enough evidence at the Genealogy Gems blog.

45 Minute Online Genealogy Consultations: Sometimes the wrong evidence or assumptions can push us into a brick wall. A fresh set of expert eyes can help you identify the problem and recommend the sources you need to pursue in order to compile trustworthy evidence.
